

The Harry and Sue Rusche Scholarship Fund 2024

Harry Rusche joined the English Department in 1962; he has over the years taught and mentored students in early modern literature and poetry. The many alumni who remain in touch with Dr. Rusche testify to their memorable relationships with him and his wife, both in and out of the classroom.

The Harry and Sue Rusche Scholarship Fund was created in 2003 with a generous gift from one of Dr. Rusche's former students. Since then, other grateful alumni have contributed to the fund; since 2010 the accumulated endowment has been administered by the English Department and awarded to an undergraduate of outstanding achievement.

The English Department invites rising senior English majors to apply for a $5,000 tuition grant from the Harry and Sue Rusche Scholarship endowment. The award is open to rising senior majors of outstanding achievement; students who are already receiving other Emory merit-based awards or courtesy scholarships cannot receive additional financial assistance from this award. For a student who is receiving need-based financial aid, this award will normally replace loan support in the financial aid package.

TO APPLY, Upload your submission using the ENG Undergraduate Awards & Writing Submission Form \(Spring 2024\). Please note in order to upload file(s), one must sign in using a Gmail account.

If you have any inquiries or trouble submitting the form, please email Khristin Isley, Undergraduate Program Coordinator in the English Department, at Khristin.isley@emory.edu.

In your application, please supply the committee appointed by the English Department with the following information:

1. A brief statement of between two to four paragraphs telling us why you chose English as your major and why you chose your particular concentration. If you are an English/Creative Writing major, please address the relationship between your literary studies and your creative work.
2. The name of your advisor.
3. A copy of your unofficial advising transcript.

If you have further questions about this prize, please email Ross Knecht Director of Undergraduate Studies in English, at ross.knecht@emory.edu
